Omnibus (Tiny) Book Report

Month: January   Due: January 25

Book Requirements: from Suetonius' Lives of the Twelve Caesars, choose one:
Galba, Otho, Vitellius, Vespasian, Titus, or Domitian

Name: _____

	Follows the required format and number of sentences (5 points for 6+ sentences).	Paragraph is on-topic and includes the required content.	Sentences support main idea of paragraph; citations are included.	Word choice is vivid and interesting, and sentence structure is complex and varied	Is neat, with good grammar/spelling. (5 points for mistake/sloppiness free.)
Instructions: Write about a character quality of the emperor you chose. Length: Four paragraphs of at least 5 sentences each. Five points for each box: excellent (5), satisfactory (4), needs improvement (2), incomplete (1), and missing (0).
CAESAR AND QUALITY: Paragraph 1 should include: • The name of the emperor and when he served. • A definition of the character quality you will be writing about. • A summary of whether you believe that character quality is good or not.
ARGUMENT CON: Paragraph 2 should include: • Why might some people disagree with you about whether that quality is good or bad? • What arguments can be made from the emperor's life? • What arguments can be made from the Bible? • Use citations from both Suetonius and the Bible.
ARGUMENT PRO: Paragraph 3 should include: • Why do you believe that quality is good or bad? • What arguments can be made from the emperor's life? • What arguments can be made from the Bible? • Use citations from both Suetonius and the Bible.
SUMMARY: Paragraph 4 should include: • Summarize the arguments against and in favor of your belief that the character quality is good or bad from the previous paragraphs. • Explain why your arguments from paragraph 3 outweigh the arguments from paragraph 2. • Answer this question: do you believe leaders today usually have this same character quality? • End with a prayer for leaders today about that quality.

____/100